

DowThermA model

The external substance allows one to model a thermal oil used as a transfer fluid, particularly in solar concentration collectors.

This is a commercial oil developed by Dow Chemical (see note in pdf format).

The company distributes a software called FLUIDFILE, which was used to generate the thermodynamic properties of the fluid, which were then identified by linear regression. Please refer to the Java code of the external class for more details.